FROM THE PLAYWRIGHT

In early June 1989, I was working at the Alley Theatre in Houston and my best friend from acting school and Atlanta, Christian Hesler, called me to say good-bye. In that final phone call, we professed our love for one another and he made a simple request, “Will you visit my grave?” “Of course I will, my darling.” He died from AIDS at his parents' home in Indiana on June 11, 1989.

His parents and I exchanged letters over the years and then the letters stopped after the birth of my youngest son who, coincidentally, was born on Christian's birthday. It took me twenty years but I finally got to Indiana to fulfill my promise. I also reconnected with his mother. All those years later, and now a mother myself, I had a new-found empathy for Christian's mother and for all mothers of people who died from AIDS. Here they were getting older without the love and comfort of their sons. They were orphaned mothers. I embarked on a mission to interview these women about their experiences in the early days of AIDS when there were so many unknowns, so much fear and misinformation. Some mothers wanted to talk to me, but many did not. I am indebted to the sisters, the cousins, the nieces, and nephews who shared their loved ones with me. This play, much like the AIDS Memorial Quilt itself, has taken years to assemble and is stitched together with love.

Love, M.* is based on extensive conversations with mothers from the last pandemic. I wanted to understand those mothers and their stories before we lost them. Ultimately, I came home to a very personal story full of humor, humanity & the healing power of love, acceptance, and the thing we all crave – connection.

My heartfelt thanks to Horizon Theatre, Lisa Adler, Heidi Cline McKerley, Marguerite Hannah, Imara Canady, David Thomas, Michael Hidalgo, ART Station, The Writer's Well, Sewanee Writer's Conference, Mickey Birnbaum/UCR/PD Low-Residency MFA Creative Writing for Performance program, Adilah Barnes, The LA Women's Theatre Festival, The Los Angeles Female Playwrights Initiative, Julie Rhoad, Roddy Williams, Gert McMullin, Ritchie Crownfield, The Name's Project and to my friends and family who supported me during this process.

Clarinda Ross, Playwright, Love, M.

ABOUT THE PANELISTS

DR. DANIEL BLACK (panelist) is an award-winning novelist, professor, and activist. His published works include They Tell Me of Home, The Sacred Place, Perfect Peace, Twelve Gates to the City, The Coming, and Listen to the Lambs. In 2014, he won the Distinguished Writer's Award from the Mid-Atlantic Writer's Association. The Go On Girl! National Book Club named him "Author of the Year" in 2011 for his novel Perfect Peace. Perfect Peace was also chosen as the 2014 selection for "If All Arkansas Read the Same Book" by the Arkansas Center for the Book at the Arkansas State Library. The novel has been reprinted more than ten times and is being heralded as an American literary classic. Dr. Black has also been twice nominated for the Townsend Literary Prize, the Ernest J. Gaines Award, the Ferro-Grumbley Literary Prize, the Lambda Literary Award, and the Georgia Author of the Year Prize. In 2015, Dr. Black's The Coming was published to broad critical acclaim. The novel is a first-hand account of the trauma and triumph of Africans aboard a slave ship in the 16th century. Reviewers call this work "brilliant", "poetic", and "a literary homage to the lives of those Africans tossed into the sea." In 2016, Dr. Black's long-awaited novel Listen to the Lambs was published. This novel explores the lives and agency of homeless people who find each other on the street and create lives of meaning without material substance. Dr. Black's work has been justly celebrated. National Book Award winning author Charles Johnson says The Coming is "powerful and brilliant." He goes on to state, "This is a work to be proud of!" Pulitzer Prize winning author Alice Walker says, "Perfect Peace is a spellbinding novel that kept me reading late into several nights. A young boy raised as a girl until 'she' was eight years old.... and then? Forced to be a 'boy.' It is a gift to have so much passion, so much love, so much beautiful writing so flawlessly faithful to the language of ancestors who grappled as best they could with more than they could ever understand. This novel will one day be a film of much benefit to us, if done well. The visuals of it will help us see what we are so often blind to: the great fluidity inherent in all things, including 'race' and sexuality. Thank you, Daniel Black." Dr. Black's newest novel, Don't Cry For Me, has recently been acquired by HarperCollins Publishers. About this novel, National Book Award winner Jesmyn Ward says, "DON'T CRY FOR ME is a perfect song: the epistolary dirge of a man singing to his son as he faces death by cancer. At turns intense and funny, tender and brutally honest, Jacob's letter to his son, Isaac, is revelatory. It's a beautiful book. Read it." Dr. Black works intermittently as a diversity consultant, having spoken at top-tier companies in America such as Google, Chan Zuckerberg Initiative, At&T, and Global Payments. He assists corporations with the goal of creating a work environment in which all employees, of every level and difference, feel supported and valued. A native of Kansas City, Kansas, Dr. Black spent his formative years in rural Blackwell, Arkansas. Dr. Black graduated from Clark College (now Clark Atlanta University) where he earned the prestigious Oxford Modern British Studies fellowship and studied at Oxford University. He was awarded a full fellowship to Temple University where he studied with poet laureate of the Black Arts Movement, Sonia Sanchez and earned his Ph.D. in African American Studies. Dr. Black is now Professor of African American Studies at his alma mater Clark Atlanta University. Dr. Black lives in Atlanta and is the founder of the Ndugu-Nzinga Rites of Passage Nation, a mentoring society for African American youth.

NATIONAL AIDS MEMORIAL

The AIDS Memorial Quilt was conceived in 1985 by long-time San Francisco gay rights activist Cleve Jones. He wanted to commemorate loved ones who had died of AIDS and allow others the space to do so as well. Jones created the first panel for the AIDS Memorial Quilt in memory of his friend Marvin Feldman and public response to the Quilt came in an outpouring of love and fabric. People in the U.S. cities most affected by AIDS—Atlanta, New York, Los Angeles and San Francisco—sent almost 2,000 panels. Donors and volunteers worked tirelessly to create what is considered the largest community arts project in history.

Today, the AIDS Memorial Quilt is an epic 54-ton tapestry that includes more than 48,000 panels dedicated to more than 100,000 individuals. Each panel is catalogued online by the National AIDS Memorial. State-specific blocks of panels are on virtual exhibition through March 2021.

View Georgia's exhibit at aidsmemorial.org/virtual-quilt/ga

Forty years into the AIDS pandemic, more than 700,000 lives in the U.S. have been lost to AIDS, more than 1.1 million people live with HIV and an estimated 1 in 7 people do not know they have HIV. In the last figures reported in 2018, Black/African American gay and bisexual men account for the largest number of new HIV diagnoses.
